EAST BRIDGEFORD, or BRIDGEFORD-ON-THE-HILL, is a township, small town and parish, pleasantly situated on the western bank of the river Trent, near the spot where was anciently a ford, and where there is now a ferry. It is in the Hundred and Union of Bingham, from which place it is 2½ miles north-north-west, 10 north-east from Nottingham, 10 south-west from Newark, 2½ from the Loudham station on the Nottingham and Lincoln railway, and 122 from London. The living is a rectory, in the bishopric of Lincoln, and the gift of the President and Fellows of Magdalene College, Oxford; the Rev. Richard William Hutchins, B.D., is the incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a fine large structure, with a tower containing 6 bells and a clock. The other places of worship are chapels for Independents, and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. The charities comprise a school for boys and girls, principally supported by the rector, and conducted on the National system, and about £370 Consols, bequeathed by different benevolent persons, for the benefit of the poor. This locality was the site of the ancient Margidunum of the Romans, and numerous relics of that people have been discovered in the neighbourhood of the village, particularly gold, silver, and brass coins of different emperors. There is in the parish an abundance of a fine kind of gypsum, or plaster of Paris. Bricks are made. The area is 1,821 acres, and the population, in 1851, was 1,155.

Giles, is an old building, with tower and pinnacles, and has 3 bells. There is a Free school, endowed by the Rev. William Thompson. The parish shares in Dame Pierrepoint's charity. Bridgeford was a Roman settlement. In the old English times there was an extensive fortification erected here to obstruct the Danes in their passage across the Trent.

GAMSTON is a township, with 124 inhabitants, 1 mile east; Burrows Hill is half a mile north.

WEST BRIDGEFORD is a parish and neat village, 1½ miles south-by-east from Nottingham, on the south side of the river Trent, at the junction of the Grantham canal, in the Hundred of Rushcliffe, Basford Union, South Notts. The population, in 1851, was 258, exclusive of Gamston, and acreage 1,078. The living is a rectory, in the diocese of Lincoln, and gift of John Chaworth Musters, Esq., lord of the manor, valued at £588; the Rev. William Musters is the present incumbent; the Rev. John Peatfield, curate. The church, dedicated to St.
